Communications and Events Manager, Grids

Location: Brussels
Start Date: 4 January

About the Global Renewables Alliance:

The Global Renewables Alliance (GRA) was established at COP27, as an umbrella organisation of 6 renewable energy associations, the Global Wind Energy Council, the Global Solar Council, the International Hydropower Association, the Green Hydrogen Organisation, the Long Duration Energy Storage Council, and the International Geothermal Association to speak with a unified voice on accelerating the energy transition.

GRA is a recognised advocacy leader, driving high-impact campaigns such as Double Down, Triple Up – 3X Renewables, and delivering major interventions at global political moments including COP, the UN General Assembly, and New York Climate Week. We work closely with governments, industry leaders, investors, multilateral institutions, and civil society to push for the policies, investments, and political commitments needed to scale renewables at the pace required.

About the role

- Join the GRA communications team to shape and deliver our communication and public affairs strategy, amplifying the voice of renewables with media, members, policymakers, and the public
- Support GRA's Grids & Storage workstream, the campaign to expand grids and energy storage at unprecedented speed to deliver the global 3xRenewables commitment by 2030
- Reporting to the Head of Communications, the officer will work closely with GRA's policy and events teams

Key responsabilities

- Play key role in communication and advocacy campaigns supporting GRA's priorities: renewable deployment, grid expansion and modernisation, energy storage, permitting reform, and clean energy investment

- Help translate technically complex energy topics into compelling stories for media, policymakers, and the public
- Assist in organising events (webinars, policy conferences, press briefings), including logistics, promotion, and outreach
- Monitor and analyse energy policy, and technical and market developments, translating them into clear, timely messaging and reactive communications
- Support stakeholder mapping and engagement with media, institutions, national governments, members, and partner organisations to build coalitions
- Track and report on communication and event performance (media coverage, engagement, reach) to inform continuous improvement

Profile we're looking for

- 3 – 7 years of experience in communications/public affairs, e.g. in an agency, consultancy, association, NGO, or institution environment
- Solid grasp of global decision-making processes and the media landscape; experience with sustainability or energy policy files is a plus
- Ability to make technical energy topics (grids, electrification, storage) accessible and engaging to non-expert audiences. Prior knowledge of these topics is desirable but not a requirement.
- Strong writing and editing skills in English; fluency in other languages, particularly Spanish, is an asset
- Proven ability to manage multiple projects and deadlines independently and with sound judgement
- Confident communicator and networker who builds trusted relationships quickly
- Event organisation experience and a hands-on, "get it done" attitude
- Genuine interest in and knowledge of the energy transition and renewables sector
- This is a Brussels based global role, some international travel is required
- The candidate must have the legal right to work and travel in Belgium

What we Offer

- A central role in shaping the public profile of the voice of the global renewables industry
- A collaborative, mission-driven team and real responsibility from day one
- Competitive salary, benefits, and a clear pathway for professional development.
- The job is a contract position for two years with the possibility of extension. The target start date is 4th of January 2027
